A clean slate.
A fresh start.
A chance to create something beautiful.

The New Place to Live.

"Here is a carefully planned, centralized community designed specifically for those people who want something just a little different...a little better than usual."

From the Midland Park Housing Brochure published circa 1959-60

In 1959, developer Curran Hall and renowned architect Ted Ross collaborated to build something entirely unlike the tract housing going up across the expanding suburbs of Toronto. The result was Midland Park, an award-winning development featuring modernist design principles and what is now lovingly known as mid-century architecture. Midland Park became a community; and thanks to its residents it's a well preserved one even today.

The Newest Place to Live.

"Madison Group is very excited to bring this new community of homes to the Midland and Lawrence area. Involving the community from the early stages of planning, MILA was thoughtfully designed and inspired by the current neighbourhood and amenities in the area. We believe this is an opportunity to bring something exciting and special to Scarborough."

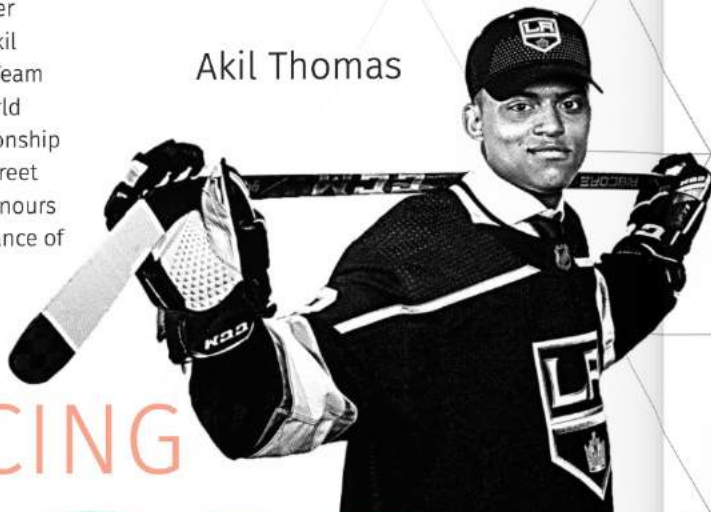

*David Singer
Vice President, Low-Rise Communities*

The nearby community of Midland Park acts as a touchstone for Madison Group's MILA development. What they both share is a respect for people-centric design and modern architecture that feels dynamic and inspiring; a place that truly feels like home.

Hometown pride inspired Madison Group to name two streets within the MILA development after Scarborough's very own Akil Thomas and Liam Foudy, Team Canada members and World Junior Ice Hockey Championship players. With these new street names, Madison Group honours the passion and perseverance of these two young athletes.

EMBRACING LOCAL TALENT

After his phenomenal Super Bowl halftime show, Grammy-winning musician The Weeknd was the reason "#Scarborough" was trending across Canada on Twitter in 2021. But residents know the list of Scarborough talent is long; comedian Lilly Singh, actor Mike Myers, artist Shary Boyle, and six-time Olympic medalist Andre De Grasse, among so many others.

To help inspire your inner designer, we've assembled three mood boards featuring materials and colours that complement the modern design of the exterior architecture.

EMERALD

Aspiring to be bold yet approachable, Emerald makes a sophisticated statement through its formality. Designed to be memorable, the palette maintains balance by complimenting the dark tones with gentle warm touches.
